TAKE THE DIVE

Just 9 minutes away from Kyoto, Otsu is the former capital of Japan and home to the country's largest lake, Lake Biwa. Later becoming known as the birthplace of Japanese Buddhism, as well as an integral connection point for travelers between modern day Tokyo and Kyoto, Otsu has cultivated a rich history and diverse folk culture which has been preserved for hundreds of years. Centuries later, the endless blue of the mother lake continues to inspire and attract visitors to this day. Come and "take the dive" into stunning seasonal scenery, storied temples and shrines, a thriving local food culture, and more at Japan's lake capital, Otsu.

1 / Former Chikurin-in Temple

This is a retreat of a former priest from Enryaku-ji Temple. The garden, which stretches to the southwest of the main building, is designated as a scenic garden by the Japanese government. The trees in the circuit-style garden, which incorporate the pure water of the river, the immaculately manicured moss and ever-changing scenery of each season offers a truly enchanting escape.

2 / Ukimido (Mangetsu-ji Temple)

This temple was built during the Heian period (794 - 1185) in the hope of keeping travelers safe as they crossed the lake. Mangetsu-ji Temple is called "Ukimido," meaning "Floating Hall," because it seems to float on the surface of the lake. It is one of the Eight Views of Omi and its beautiful scenery is a highlight of the area. The view of Lake Biwa against the blue sky, Ukimido on the surface of the lake, and the rising sun are not to be missed.

Note: Omi is the historical name of Shiga Prefecture.

3 / The Lake Biwa Canal

This canal was constructed in the Meiji era (1868 - 1912) to carry water from Lake Biwa to Kyoto. With a history stemming back over a hundred years, traces of its Meiji era past can still be found at this mellow canal. This is also known as one of the most famous cherry blossom spots in Otsu, with mountain cherry and Yoshino cherry trees blossoming in spring.

World Heritage site brimming with a sacred atmosphere
Hieizan Enryaku-ji Temple

This is the head temple of the Tendai sect of Buddhism, and runs along the borders of Otsu and Kyoto. Also called the mother temple of Japanese Buddhism, many monks have trained here over the years. To the east, the grand view of Lake Biwa spreads across the land, and to the west, panoramic views of the city of Kyoto. With 1,200 years of history and tradition, Hieizan Enryaku-ji Temple was registered as a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1994. The temple grounds are packed with things to see and do, such as a temple bell that visitors can ring and a popular cafe. The temple cafe is known for its Sanskrit latte and Sanskrit dessert set which are only available on weekends and holidays.
